SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Sick Headache, Chronic Diarrhœa, Jaundice, Impurity of the Blood, Fever and Ague, Malaria, and all Diseases caused by Derangement of Liver, Bowels and Kidneys.

SYMPTOMS OF A DISEASED LIVER.

Bad Breath; Pain in the Side, sometimes the pain is felt under the Shoulder-blade, mistaken for Rheumatism; general loss of appetite; Bowels generally costive, sometimes alternating with lax; the head is troubled with pain, is dull and heavy, with considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of leaving undone something which ought to have been done; a slight, dry cough and flushed face is sometimes an attendant, often mistaken for consumption; the patient complains of weariness and debility; nervous, easily startled; feet cold or burning, sometimes a prickly sensation of the skin exists; spirits are low and despondent, and, although satisfied that exercise would be beneficial, yet one can hardly summon up fortitude to try it—in fact, distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred when but few of them existed, yet examination after death has shown the Liver to have been extensively deranged.

It should be used by all persons, old and young, whenever any of the above symptoms appear.

Persons Traveling or Living in Unhealthy Localities, by taking a dose occasionally to keep the Liver in healthy action, will avoid all Malaria, Bilious attacks, Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Depression of Spirits, etc. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage.

If You have eaten anything hard of digestion, or feel heavy after meals, or sleepless at night, take a dose and you will be relieved.

Time and Doctors' Bills will be saved by always keeping the Regulator in the House!

For, whatever the ailment may be, a thoroughly safe purgative, alterative and tonic can never be out of place. The remedy is harmless and does not interfere with business or pleasure.

IT IS PURELY VEGETABLE,

And has all the power and efficacy of Calomel or Quinine, without any of the injurious after effects.

A Governor's Testimony.

Simmons Liver Regulator has been in use in my family for some time, and I am satisfied it is a valuable addition to the medical science.
J. GILL SHORTER, Governor of Ala.

Hon. Alexander H. Stephens, of Ga., says: Have derived some benefit from the use of Simmons Liver Regulator, and wish to give it a further trial.

"The only Thing that never fails to Relieve."—I have used many remedies for Dyspepsia, Liver Affection and Debility, but never have found anything to benefit me to the extent Simmons Liver Regulator has. I sent from Minnesota to Georgia for it, and would send further for such a medicine, and would advise all who are similarly affected to give it a trial as it seems the only thing that never fails to relieve.
P. M. JASSAY, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dr. T. W. Mason says: From actual experience in the use of Simmons Liver Regulator in my practice I have been and am satisfied to use and prescribe it as a purgative medicine.

THE FORSAKEN.

TWO FAIR VICTIMS.

You are rather late this morning, Bridget."

"I'm half dead, ma'am."

"What's the matter? You look tired out."

"That I am, ma'am, wid watchin' all night. Indade I couldn't get here before to commence me washin', ma'am."

"Is your little girl ill?"

"No, ma'am; ye know I live on Sullivan street. Well, t'other day I heard some of 'em say as how a poor crathur was very ill in the back basement. Me friend, Mrs. McCloud, spoke to me yesterday about the woman being a lady, and that she was a dreadful sufferer, and was without the comforts of life. So I jist made up me mind I would go in and do what I could for the poor thing."

"You have a good heart, Bridget."

"I'm glad that I'm not a heathen, ma,am, if I do live in this God for saken city. Well, I found Mrs. Lovell (that's the lady's name, ma'am) very sick and awful poor. She don't spake much; she moans all the time. I do belave she'll die."

"I am glad, Bridget, that you have told me about this poor woman. I am impressed that I can make her comfortable."

"God bless you, Mrs. Currier," quickly exclaimed the warm-hearted washerwoman.

Mrs. Currier hastened up stairs to make her street toilet. Her sweet face wore a sad, thoughtful expression. She somehow felt as though she must go and see this Mrs. Lovell; she seemed to be forced onward by a power far stronger than her generosity of heart, than her charitable inclinations. Mrs. Currier was a very benevolent lady, and took a pleasure in administering to the poor. It was only one year since she had graduated from a fashionable boarding school and became the wife of Henry Currier, a millionaire, who took his lovely and accomplished bride to his elegant home in the metropolis.

Mrs. Currier soon became a society favorite, and yet she sought out the poor and distressed, trying to alleviate their trials and wants with so much earnestness and deep feeling that one would almost imagine that she had some time in the course of her short life dwelt in the midst of poverty and wretchedness. But it was only her natural innate goodness that made her remember her duty to the unfortunate while she enjoyed all the luxuries that wealth could secure.

It was a bright, lovely morning in April, 1872. Nature had donned her rich garments of tinted greens, and some of Flora's offerings had come to gladden the eye and perfume the air. The shade trees that were scattered here and there imparted to the crowded city an air of almost rural freshness, and the beauty of the little parks recalled to the passers-by the charm of rusticating country rambles, rippling brooks, and the sweet seclusion of groves musical with the love notes of a thousand feathered songsters.

It was not long before the fashionable lady and favorite child of fortune was picking her way through one of the dirtiest streets in all Gotham

Bridget led the way upon arriving at the dingy abode. The steps were broken, and the basement room contained only one small window. The soft spring never entered this wretched place—where filth reigned supreme. In a corner of the room, lying upon an old straw bed, was a woman, who looked so pale, so ethereal, with her bright golden hair falling over her alabaster like shoulders, that Mrs. Currier gazed in wonderment upon the beautiful sleeping invalid.

Bridget crossed herself and softly whispered, "The poor creatur', she's dead, sure."

A few rays of sunlight now stole into the dingy cellar through the door that the visitors had left partly opened, and seemed to timidly creep along the stone floor up to the sufferer and exposed more vividly her pallid face.

Mrs. Currier wiped her eyes, but the tears would come. She gazed around the room—no sign of comfort was there The place had the appearance of a cave, and the dimly heard noises of the great city seemed like the distant roar of the ocean.

The invalid moved and opened her great blue eyes. Mrs. Currier stepped a little back and motioned for Bridget to advance to the bed

"How do ye fale now?" asked the washerwoman, in a pitiful tone of voice.

"The same," answered Mrs. Lovell, again opening her eyes.

"I've brought somebody who'll be a friend to yees," said Bridget.

"I need no friends," answered Mrs. Lovell, sighing.

Mrs. Currier now approached the sick woman, and taking her thin hand into her soft palm, said, in a gentle, sisterly manner.

"You are very ill, and I have come here to befriend you, to have you removed, if possible, to a comfortable place."

The sick woman opened her eyes and earnestly gazed at Mrs. Currier. A faint smile played around her delicately formed mouth; she raised her right hand, and slowly gathering up her golden hair, in a low voice said:

"It is too late to make me comfortable, but I thank you for coming. Please cut off my hair."

Mrs. Currier was somewhat startled on hearing this strange request, and, glancing at the beautiful tresses, she kindly said:

"It seems a pity to cut off your lovely hair; when you are well you will need it."

"I am done with it. O, how proud I was of it once."

Again the invalid slowly ran her fingers through the golden tresses, and then reaching out her hand she drew Mrs. Currier close to her and whispered:

"Please send Bridget away; I would like to say something to you. The woman is kind to me, but I do not care for her to learn my secret."

When Mrs. Lovell saw that she was alone with Mrs. Currier, she wildly pressed her hands together and said:

"How kind my God is to send you here! I have long wished to meet with some one whom I could trust who would send my hair to England. You look surprised at my request. Alas! you don't know my sad history."

"I know that you are very ill, dear, and I am here to befriend you."

"I thank you—thank you. How beautiful you look! A real lady and come to this wretched place! Will you do me a great favor?"

"I will try to; confide in me. What do you wish?"

"Cut off my hair first please, and then I will tell you who I am."

Mrs. Currier took the scissors from the stand and gathered up the rich tresses. Her eyes filled with tears; she hesitated, and holding the scissors half open, she feelingly asked:

"Do you really wish me to cut off your hair?"

"I do," answered Mrs. Lovell, firmly.

"There it is off, and I am sorry," said Mrs. Currier, laying the hair down on the bed.

The sufferer gently raised her hand and tenderly smoothed the disheveled locks, exclaiming in a childlike manner:

"How much I used to think of you! and dear grandma, she loved you too! And how he worshipped your beauty—many times his delicate fingers have fondled you!"

Mrs. Lovell's voice became choked with weeping. She pressed her small, shapely hands to her forehead and groaned aloud.

Mrs. Currier exerted all her influence in soothing the poor woman.

"I do believe I could die in peace if I could tell my sorrows to some one!"

"I deeply sympathize with you," said Mrs. Currier.

"I appreciate your kindness," said Mrs. Lovell; "and I will trust you with my story."

"Mrs. Lovell looked wildly around the room. For a moment she seemed greatly excited. With an effort she partially controlled her feelings, and speaking in a low tone, said:

"I was born in Manchester, England. My parents died when I was an infant. My grandma cared for me. She gave me a beautiful home, where I lived very happily. I loved her, and yet I wronged her. It is just two years ago to morrow that I was married to an American gentleman. I was 16 years old. Ah! how my dear grandma cried when I told her I was married. She never liked my husband. In three weeks time he was obliged to return to this country. He promised to come back in two months, and said we should never again be parted. The two months at last expired, but without bringing the beloved one. Oh, how anxiously I watched for him, and how dear grandma tired to comfort me. Months passed, and no tidings came of the wanderer. I could bear the suspense—the dreadful waiting—no longer. I stole away from home, came to America, and searched everywhere for Harry. All my trouble has been in vain.

"As a last resort to find my dear husband I inserted an advertisement in the Herald's personals, and so worded it that if it meets his eye he cannot fail to recognize it as coming from his wife. I hope he'll come before I die. I must see him once more and learn from his own lips why he has deserted me. Oh, I would like grandma to have my hair. Please write to this address, and say that I am sorry for the heartaches I have caused her. Tell her that my great love for Harry made me more wretched than happy. Do not let her know how wretchedly I die."

Mrs. Lovell was very much exhausted by the exertion of talking. She closed her eyes and gave her hand to Mrs. Currier, who assured the poor woman that she would carry out her request, and would also have her properly buried if she died. At this moment the door was hurriedly pushed open and a gentleman quickly walked up to the bedside.

Mrs. Lovell started up, and screamed out in a wild, frantic tone, "Harry! my Harry!" and threw herself into the gentleman's arms.

He held her close to his breast, fondly kissing her brow, cheeks, and lips, and then smilingly gazing into her pale face, he exclaimed in loving tones:

"Dearest Fanny, O, forgive me. I have not seen one happy hour since we parted. Tell me, darling wife, that you forgive me and love me still."

Suddenly the gentleman grew pale; he stared wildly at the sufferer, and quickly laying her back on the pillow, he cried out:

"Great Heaven! she is dead!" He turned to gaze about the dismal room, when his eyes glared wildly, his face became more pallid, his whole body shook with fright. There stood his gentle wife a witness to his crime—the living and the dead—victims both—there they were before him to appal his guilty soul.

Mrs. Currier was shocked, grieved, and absolutely terrified. In a second all the sunshine of existence was forever darkened.

The golden tresses again crossed the ocean, but when they arrived in England the old grandma was dead.

Mrs. Currier never reproached her husband with words, but her pale face and wasted form censured him more than language could have done, and when in six months' time after this sad exposure Harry Currier laid his wife away to rest among the dead, his heart bade farewell to all happiness. He still lives surrounded by wealth, but no riches can erase from his memory the evil that he has committed. He often repeats to a near friend who knows his history, "the wages of sin is death."

USEFUL KNOWLEDGE.—To an old time farmer the helps modern farmers have in the way of machinery and aids from scientific men seem wonderful. Much of the aid from improved machinery is due to the war of the Rebellion. Help was scarce, and a great demand for farm products existed, calling out the skill of the inventor, and well that call was responded to. A great deal of help, too, has come from scientific men, such as entomologists and bontanists. The former tells of the insects injurious to the farm crops. To the science of botany we owe the introduction of many new and profitable crops—plants brought from all parts of the world, and distributed everywhere. We owe also to the practical bontanists, the improvement of old crops, through the arts of hybridization or crossing, and also great improvement through selection and high breeding, which have increased the yield of all our standard crops very greatly. This is well understood by us all, and every enterprising farmer or gardener watches for the new products, knowing that many of them will prove profitable in his hands.

The Petroleum Fields of Pennsylania.

Practically, petroleum has become the light of the world in the broadest sense, being found in the cabin of the pioneer, in the subterranean haunt of the miner and in the mansions of the refined and wealthy. Even the barbarians and half civilized races have adopted it because of its excellent illuminating qualities and its marvelous cheapness. American petroleum lights the dwellings of Jerusalem, the rock temples of the Upper Nile, the Indian bungalow and the homes and temples of China and Japan.

Some idea of its relative cheapness when compared with the old illuminators may be obtained when it is stated that it can be bought at retail of the ordinary grocer at from ten to fifteen cents per gallon, whereas in the old days sperm oil and camphene sold at from seventy-five cents to one dollar and fifty per gallon. This cheapness has driven out of the market every other form of illuminating fluid, and it is of great importance to the world that has become so accustomed to its use that the supply shall be maintained or something equally cheap and available be found as a substitute. Its annual production has arisen from a few hundred barrels in 1859 to thirty millions in 1882. Yet in all that time the demand has so near kept pace with the supply that the immense surplus of upwards of thirty million barrels now above ground would not answer for two year's supply if the production were cut off. It ranks third in value as an article of export from the United States, breadstuffs and cotton alone exceeding it. When we reflect that wheat and cotton are the productions of a vast expanse of our territory and that petroleum is the product of half a dozen counties in one corner of our own State the forty millions annually which our own petroleum exports represent simply seem astonishing.

How long can this immense supply be kept up? This question is being asked with a good deal of earnestness and anxiety by the thoughtful men who have embarked their all in the business. While it is quite possible that petroleum is being constantly generated, yet the process is so slow as to be of no practical value in keeping up the supply. The history of the petroleum developments teaches that the rich fields are practically exhausted in from one to five years after being opened. There are many of the richest oil farms along Oil Creek and its tributaries which at present are not producing a single barrel of oil, while many more furnish only the smallest modicum of their former production.

It is only a question of time when the Pennsylvania oil fields will be among the things of the past. How much time will be required to exhaust them at the present rate of production? This cannot, of course, be answered with any degree of certainty, but there are many of the veteran oil men who do not believe it will take near as many years to deplete the balance of the Pennsylvania oil deposits at the present rate of production as it has taken to bring that production up to its present status.

The drill has pretty effectually defined the extent of the field in which productive territory may be hoped for. The southern limit of the oleaginous belt may be said to be fixed by a line drawn from Kittanning, in Armstrong county, to Saxonburgh, in Butler county. The oil bearing rock at this southern extremity of the field dips so far below sea level that the oil was either never generated here or else it has been forced to higher levels by the salt water contained in the rock. A cordon of wildcat wells which failed to find anything but gas has been drilled at various times and places in Western Butler, Mercer, Central and Western Crawford and Erie counties. These experiments may be said to have practically defined the Western limits of the oil field. Coming East, a line drawn from Smethport, on the north, to Leechburg, Armstrong county, on the south, will nearly outline the general course of a cordon of dry holes and gas wells which have been drilled near Wilcox and Millstone in Elk county, Stump Creek in Jefferson and Leechburg in Armstrong and which clearly limits the extension of the field to the eastward. These experiments, then, confine the productive territory to the counties of Butler, Armstrong, Clarion Venargo, Eastern Crawford, Forest, Warren and McKean. The available territory in the first five named counties has already been practically exhausted, although it is quite probable that a number of small pools of the Pithole and Bullun order may yet be found in either of them. McKean is on the decline, its productive territory being clearly defined and much more than half exhausted, leaving only Warren and Forest to yet be tested for virgin territory. The great deposits just being opened in Cherry Grove township, Warren county, are now supposed to comprise about 2,500 acres, leaving a good deal of lighter territory to be tested in Southeastern Warren and all of the Eastern Forest practically undrilled. But at the rate at which drilling is now prosecuted it will take less than two years to drill over the whole field sufficiently to tell pretty near what is there. In Forest the Grandins, L. F. Watterson, the Enterprise Transit Company and other wealthy land-owners hold large tracts, which they can keep from the drill for a long time if they see fit, which they will probably do if the price remains as low as at present. There are, therefore, not a few old operators who are confidently counting on the present Cherry Grove developement as the last big field that will ever be opened up to the drilling public, they expecting, of course, that the large tracts in Forest county above described will be held and operated leisurely by the present proprietors. Civil engineers like Whigley and Opperman have already undertaken to furnish approximate figures showing the remaining supply of Pennsylvania petroleum and indicating that much more than half of it has already been exhausted. This, of course, is very uncertain, but there are many things to indicate that they are right in their conjectures and that the end of these marvelous supplies of oleaginous wealth is not far off.

But the world must have petroleum or its equivalent. When the Pennsylvania fields are exhausted, can the supply be made good from all other fields? This question is hard to answer. New York has some rich deposits, which are being rapidly exhausted. The belt however, may extend much farther north and new fields be opened in that quarter. The wild-cat drilling has not yet been thorough enough to finally determine the extent of the New York petroleum deposits. There is known to be oil in West Virginia, Kentuckey, Tennessee and California, but the richness of the Pennsylvania fields has prevented anything like an exhaustive test of the extent and value of these deposits. Russia has some very rich territory while several of the European countries lay claim to large deposits of oleaginous wealth. But whether any or all of these prospective fields shall be able to fill the demand made upon their resources when the Pennsylvania deposits are exhausted can only be determined when the energetic Pennsylvania oil operator is forced to leave his favorite fields and begins to bounce the busy drill in the new districts. If the oil is there he will find it, for he is untiring in his search, being possessed with a sort of mania for the discovery of the greasy fluid, without regard to whether it pays or not. In the meantime the consumption is constantly on the increase, stimulated by the fabulous cheapness of the article, and as long as it can be profitably produced at the present prices is likely to be extended indefinately.—The Times.

The Colorado Canon.

Captain Dutton's Report, just now published, illustrates the features of the region, portraying the magnificence of its various parts by remarkably effective views and word-pictures, besides describing its geological structure and history.

It has nowhere a width less than its depth, and is generally of much greater width; and over part of the broad area are crowds of mountain towers and temples, 3,000 to 5,500 feet in height, with combinations of amphitheatres, alcoves, buttresses and towers along the sides; and all is open to the sunlight.

The scenic effects of the out-cropping formations depend greatly on the horizontal bedding; but also largely on the unequal spacing of the beds, the variations in hardness tending to make cliffs to alternate with taluses at longer or shorter intervals; and on the diversities in shade and brilliancy of coloring. The architectural forms, though on a mountain scale, are literally architectural, and different in type for the different formations. We quote a few paragraphs from the descriptive part of the Report:

"In an hour's time we reached the crest of the isthmus, and in an instant there flashed before us a scene never to be forgotten—that of the temples and towers of the Virgen. At our feet the surface drops down by cliff and talus 1,200 upon a broad and rugged plain cut by narrow canons. The slopes, the winding ledges, the bosses of projecting rock, the naked, scanty soil display colors which are truly amazing. Chocolate, maroon, purple, lavender, magenta, with broad bands of toned white, are laid in horizontal belts, strongly contrasting with each ether, and the ever-varying slope of the surface cuts across them capriciously, so that the sharply-defined belts wind about like the contours of a map. From right to left across the farther foreground of the picture stretches the inner canon of the Virgen, 600 feet in depth and here of considerable width. Its bottom is for the most part unseen, but in one place it is disclosed by a turn in its course, showing the vivid green of vegetation. Across the canon, and rather more than a mile and a half beyond it, stands the central and commanding object of the picture, the western temple, rising 4,000 feet above the river. Its glorious summit was the object we had seen an hour before, and now the matchless beauty and majesty of its vast mass is all before us; yet it is only the central object of a mighty throng of structures wrought up to the same exalted style, and filling up the entire panorama. Directly in front of us a complex mass of white towers, springing from a central pile, mounts upward to the clouds. Out of their midst, and high over all, rises the dome-like mass of the temple which dominates the entire landscape. It is almost pure white, with brilliant streaks of carmine decending its vertical walls. The towers which surround it are of inferior mass and altitude, but each of them is a study of fine form and architectural effect. They are white above, and change to a strong, rich red below. Dome and towers are planted upon a substructure no less admirable. Its plan is indefinite, but its profiles are perfectly systematic. A curtin wall, 1,400 feet high, descends vertically from the eaves of the temples, and is succeeded by a steep slope of ever-widening base-courses leading down to the esplanade below. The curtain wall is decorated with a lavish display of vertical mouldings, and the ridges, eaves, and mitred angles are fretted with serrated cusps. This ornamentation is suggestive rather than precise, but it is none the less effective. It is neither repetitive, nor symmetrical. But though exact symmetry is wanting, nature has here brought home to us the truth that symmetry is only one of an infinite range of devices by which beauty can be materialized."—The Am. Journal of Science.

INK ERASER.—The great lightning ink eraser may be used instead of a knife or scraper for erasing ink in order to rectify a mistake or clean off a blot, without injury to the paper, leaving the paper as clean and good to write upon as it was before the blot or mistake was made, and without injury to the printer's ink upon any printed form or ruling upon any first-class paper. Take of chloride of lime, one pound, thoroughly pulverized, and four quarts soft water. The above must be thoroughly shaken when first put together. It is required to stand twenty-four hours to dissolve the chloride of lime. Then strain through a cotton cloth, after which add a teaspoonful of acetic acid (No. 8, commercial), to every ounce of chloride of lime water. The eraser is used by reversing the pen-holder in the hand, dipping the end into the fluid, and applying it, without rubbing, to the blot required to be erased. When the ink has disappeared, absorb the fluid into a blotter, and the paper is immediately ready to write upon.

A Strange Story.

A young man by the name of Micah Sherman, the oldest son of a widow living in the town of Hampden, on the Penobscot River, had been in failing health for some time, and thinking that a sea voyage might be beneficial, he started in the barque Templar, Captain S. Bartlett, for a voyage to Liverpool and the Chincha Islands and from there home.

His half-brother, Mr. Joshua Sherman, now of Bangor, was first officer of the ship. It was from him we had this singular story.

It seems that the poor boy derived no advantage from the voyage, but steadily grew worse until at last, when near Cape Horn, he seemed to be in the last stages of consumption.

He lay in his bunk the greater part of the time in a sort of drowsy state. One day when his brother visited his sick-bed he suddenly said—

"Joshua, I have been home and have seen mother, and don't yo think, she is married again!"

"Why," replied his brother, "you have only been dreaming."

"No," he said, "I have surely been home, and mother is married again and the house is full. Her husband has brought his family there, and one of his children, a young girl, is sick."

A day or two afterward he said he had been home again, and added that the sick girl coughed all the time.

After a number of days had elapsed he said, "Well, I have been home again, and they have moved the pig stye and some of the other out-buildings," also saying that the sick girl seemed much worse.

His brother paid scarcely any attention to these visions, thinking they were simply vag

England has sent 40,000 troops to Egypt to conquer Arabi Pasha. Arabi has been given an opportunity to lay down his arms, and if he does not comply he will be declared a rebel.

It is cited as a singular coincidence that the adopted son of Aaron Burr died in New York only two days after the son of Alexander Hamilton expired in the same city.

Senator James Gay Gordon expresses the opinion that Controller Pattison will meet the State on election night at the county line with a majority and that he will have a plurality of over 20,000.

Stalwart editors now call the writings of their brethren of the Independent persuasion, "vaporings". Strange what a change a difference of opinion makes! And yet these editors have all been riding together in the same boat for the last twenty years, and have just found each other out.

Judge Elwell having been renominated he will be re-elected, of course. He is recognized as one of the ablest as well as most clear headed president judges in the state. The people of Columbia and Montour counties will honor themselves by re-electing him by acclamation.—Gazette & Bulletin.

Congress adjourned last week. It has always been the custom to pass a resolution of thanks to the speaker at the close of a session, but the conduct of Kiefer has been such that even his friends dared not present such a resolution as they knew it would be openly opposed. This is the first time that a Speaker of the House has been dismissed without a "thank you" and the treatment was well deserved.

Candidate Stewart has challenged Candidate Beaver to meet him on the stump to discuss the issues between the two Republican factions. This places Beaver in a bad fix, for if he accepts Stewart will talk him out of his one shoe, and if he declines he will be called a coward. Quay evidently anticipated the situation when he wrote a letter saying "Dear Beaver, Don't talk."

A Roman Catholic bishop has created quite a sensation by forbidding the ladies under his jurisdiction to wear bangs. He also forbids them to play any music that is not "classical." Some of the clergy think the bishop is going too far in prescribing for women what they shall wear, as they are supposed to be the best judges as to how their personal attire shall be made up.

The State League, an organization of colored men, working in the interest of the Stalwart candidates held a session at Williamsport on Tuesday. The chairman delivered an address in which he urged all colored voters to stand by Beaver. Chairman Cooper and his committee no doubt paid the expenses of the convention. Chairman Stewart should now look after the colored brethren.

According to the St. Louis Republican, the intrinsic value of the bronze medals bestowed upon the Old Guard of 1306 is about thirteen cents apiece. They are made of some cheap composition, and enclosed in a thin covering of bronze, on which the figurehead of Grant and the other devices are stamped. Is this the reason Beaver does not wear his medal when he appears in public?

The Danville Intelligencer commends the COLUMBIAN for its effort to prevent unlawful nominations, and joins us in the good work by offering a reward of fifty dollars for the conviction of the first rascal found using money to buy votes for the Republican party this fall. The newspapers are guardians of honest elections, and it is through their influence alone that bribery and fraud can be defeated.

The Philadelphia Times has sent out a circular to congressional nominees in the state asking for an answer to the four following questions which are expected to come before the next congress: Are you in favor of reducing the internal revenue tax except on whisky and tobacco? Are you opposed to political assessments on federal officeholders? Do you favor retrenchment in the government expenses? and are you in favor of abolishing the internal revenue offices.

The vote of the Democratic Delegate election was one of the largest ever polled in this county at the primaries, there being 2752 votes cast. The nominations tally with the popular vote, Vanderslice receiving 1440, Bryson 1251, Dewitt 857, Hamlin 796, Fox 287, for Representative. For Sheriff Mourey received 1477, Swank 821, Wolf, 387. There is not the slightest ground for complaint, with the nominations, first, because nearly three fourths of the party took part in the election, and second, because the nominees are those who received the highest popular vote. Any talk about fraud is therefore entirely without foundation. The result of the convention was governed by the voice of the people.

The Democracy of this county are not ashamed of a single nomination made by the recent convention, not withstanding the abuse of the Philadelphia Times, of one of our candidates for the Legislature. McClure, the editor of the Times, has begun a systematic persecution of every member of the last legislature who refused to vote for his pet scheme, the Delinquent tax bill. Because he could not force men to act in accordance with his wishes he now calls them "roosters" and "jobbers." The members who have been renominated will be elected, and McClure will find as the result, the people of this county have more confidence in their candidates than they have in the Times.

Republican Testimony.

The Columbia-Montour Congressional district being hopelessly Democratic, it is consoling to know that ex-Senator Buckalew's calling and election as the next Representative is now certain. Mr. Buckalew is a Bourbon after the straightest sect, but he believes in old fashioned honesty in politics, and that is what is sadly needed at Washington these days. Besides, he is a man of ability, experience, and national reputation, and will add to the dignity and influence of the delegation.—Philadelphia Evening Telegram.

A FRIEND OF THE WORKINGMEN AND FARMERS.

A Correspondent writing to the Farmer's Friend & Grange Advocate, the official paper of the Grange in Pennsylvania, published at Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county, speaks of Hon. Silas M. Clark as follows:

He owns and cultivates a large farm adjoining the borough of Indiana. Although not a member of the Grange, is the friend of the farmer and workingman. Such men are seldom nominated for office, and the farmer and workingmen afforded an opportunity to secure a representative. He has been for several years, and now is, president of the Indiana County Agricultural Society, and devotes time in the improvement and encouragement of the interests of the agricultural class. He is president of the State Normal School, and has acquired a reputation through the State as an educator and benefactor. Is a clear, methodical and logical reasoner, with a broad, comprehensive, and discriminating and judical mind. Is one of the ablest lawyers of the state, and engaged in a varied and extensive practice for twenty-five years.

The Fleshy Perquisites of the Supreme Court Judges.

For high toned perquisites, privileges and luxuries, the jolly old owls on the Supreme Court bench would take the premium at the world's fair—they would take the cake, the oven, the baker and the farmer's wheat field. In the first place every one of the Judges has a room in his house furnished by the Government luxuriously—a perfect library in itself. The walls are covered with book cases filled with law books of value and usefulness, the floors are richly carpeted, a great, massive desk occupies the centre of the room, morocco lounges and easy chairs invite you to repose, and the body servant is just without the door awaiting the tinkle of the silver bell. These, including the body servant, are paid out of Uncle Sam's pouch. If you go to dine with a Judge, or Secretary, an Assistant Secretary, or an assistant anything, or a Senator, behind your chair you will probably find a waiter, paid for by the Government as a messenger or a laborer. Each Judge has his own man. The Supreme Court has more officers and men than any similar institution in the world thrice over. One thing the Judges have not, except on days of ceremony, and that is, carriages. Many indeed, nearly all of them, drive their own private carriages, but in all other respects they are about like Cabinet officers, except more so, With ten thousand dollars a year and pension when they retire; with a library, a body servant, three or six months vacation every year, and the respect of all mankind, the Supreme Court Judges can walk along the flowery paths leading to old age with the jolly idea that they are lucky as well as wise.—Washington Letter Philadelphia Press.

Why Fit Legislators are Needed.

The Democratic party has made its pledge that (in the event of its success) it will give to the people of the state "an honest, just and true congressional and legislative apportionment." In this, as in every other promise of our platform, we must be as good as our word. Hundreds and thousands of Republicans will vote our ticket this fall, for the first time; and they will do this because they believe that the Democratic party has taken a step, and a long step, on the road to governmental reform; and for the selfish reason that we desire these men to remain with us, and for other and higher reasons, we must demonstrate that we deserve to go into power in the state, and that we can be trusted with the control of the affairs of the commonwealth. For the accomplishment of these great ends let the word be passed along the line that none but the best and purest men are to be named for legislative honors. When such men are nominated let the canvass be conducted on the distinct pledge that their election means not a partisan triumph, but the selection of men earnest in the cause of good government, looking to a fair and honest administration of the affairs of the whole people. The time is at hand when the professional politician, low grade and high grade; seeking the welfare not even of his party, but of one faction of it; corrupting the ballot box; bargaining for pardons; robbing the taxpayer and the commonwealth; must give place to the patriot. Men will hold no parley with ringsters and rounders, in the white light of to-day. Good men and true are the hope and reliance of our people. Every man on the Democratic state ticket is of this high character. The Democracy must supplement these nominations with their best men for the Senate and House. And when the glad hour of victory comes it must be held as a sacred duty—the slightest neglect of which will be treasonable and disgraceful—to use the power so gained in the interests of the whole people first. So used power will be added to power, until we shall have redeemed the commonwealth wholly from the control of the spoilsman and the boss. And so will die out forever within our borders the heresy that the public service is the private property of whatever party or faction holds power in the state.—Lancaster Intelligencer.

Destructive Tornado in Maine.

BANGOR, Aug. 15.—The most destructive tornado ever experienced in this vicinity visited Bangor this evening. The wind blew with terrific velocity, and rain fell in sheets converting the streets into roaring streams, the whole accompanied by incessant thunder and lightning. The destruction of property is very great, and will amount to between $50,000 and $100,000.

A Voluntary Contribution.

"How did you come to get in jail?" asked a gentleman of a negro he saw behind the bars. "Dey put me in heah for borryin' money from a friend." "Why, they can't do that; it's no crime to borrow money." "Yes, boss, but yer see I had ter knock him down wid a club several times before he would loan it ter me, an' den I had ter take it outen his pocket myself." That was what Hubbell would call a voluntary contribution.—Texas Siftings

Bold Bank Robbery.

KEWANEE, Ill., Aug. 15.—Yesterday afternoon two men called at the First National bank here and left their satchels. They called for them at six o'clock, while Cashier Pratt and Miss Palmer, a clerk, were alone in the building. The lady opened the door for them and was knocked insensible by one of the men, while the other pushed into the office and stunned Pratt. They then placed the lady and Pratt in the vault and decamped with $20,000, $6,000 of which was gold. Miss Palmer and Pratt managed to release themselves in about an hour. Up to midnight the robbers had not been caught.

The Republicans of Pennsylvania Doomed.

There is nothing in the political situation in Pennsylvania calculated to afford Republicans much pleasure. Senator Cameron does not appear to realize that he and his system are doomed, although everybody else does. We say everybody else does, in spite of the repeated announcement that Chairman Cooper is "sanguine of success" and has already figured out General Beaver's election. We do not believe that Mr. Cooper is quite so absurd a person as he seems anxious to appear to be. Victories on paper are always easy, and anyone can have all he has the patience to figure out. Mr. Cooper's figures are simply preposterous, and there is no reason to suppose that he is deceived by them.

The plain fact is that there are two Republican tickets in the field, and there are not enough Republican votes in the State to elect more than one. Indeed it is a notorious fact that a first-class Republican ticket, satisfactory to both Republican factions, could be elected over Mr. Pattison, the Democratic candidate, only by hard work. No party can breed a quarrel like that which Mr. Cameron's management has caused in Pennsylvania and not lose strength by it. In addition to this, there is Mr. Pattison's independent reform record, and the fact that thousands of Republicans in Philadelphia have voted for him as Controller and have seen no cause for regretting it. What they have done once they will find it easy to do again.

It is absurd to say, therefore, that General Beaver has any chance of being elected. He could not be if the Independent ticket were out of the field. He simply blocks the way. The Independents say he represents Bossism, against which they are fighting, and that so long as he stays in the field they will stay. Upon him rests the responsibility of the threatened disaster. Senator Cameron put him in the field in the face of the Independent protest, because he did not believe the Independents would dare to continue their opposition. He has found out now that he miscalculated, but, rather than retreat, he will defeat the party. Let the responsibility be put where it belongs—upon the Boss system.—N. Y. Tribune.

Attempts to boycott the products of Chinese workmanship in San Francisco are not entirely successful. While Chinese cheap labor is vigorously denounced, practical experience shows that when it comes to the actual payment of coin, the wares that cost least at the same quality are the ones purchased. When Chinese-made shoes are placed beside others that white workmen have manufactured, and are sold fifty cents a pair cheaper, they are nearly always preferred.

The Campaign Columbian.

We will send the COLUMBIAN to any address in the county, from now until after the fall election for 30 cents. As this will be an unusually interesting campaign every Democratic voter should take a paper and keep himself posted. There is not a man in the county who cannot afford to take the COLUMBIAN at that price, and we hope to receive many orders. Postage stamps can be sent by mail.

The wind blows over the oats stubble with a promise of cool nights, and the opening of the theatrical season at various points this week gives warning that summer is drawing to a close.

An accident occurred at Williamsport recently, by which an Italian was initiated into the mysteries of American explosives. He was investigating the make-up of one of the percussion caps used in blasting, when it exploded, blowing off one hand.

The next Grand Jury can do no more commendable act than by recommending the purchase of a clock for the Court House steeple that will keep some kind of time. The present one is now, and has been for years, a public nuisance.

There is some talk among the lawyers of asking the Court to change the September term, to the first two weeks in October. This would bring it in a cooler season, and would no doubt suit the farmers better than September.

Some one has evidently been personating the senior editor of this paper in Berwick. Last week the Gazette and Independent both very courteously announced our presence in that town, but we were not there. Thanks for the kind notices all the same.

The fall term of the Bloomsburg State Normal School will open on the 5th of September. As the school has established a reputation as one of the leading institutions of the State there will no doubt be a large attendance.

This year ought certainly give large attendance at the harvest home celebration, because of the full crops. We have not yet heard of any arrangements for one in this county. Other counties are a little ahead of us in this respect.

Miss Eva Rupert graduated at Chautauqua on Saturday last, having taken a four years' course. There were about two thousand who graduated, of which seven hundred were present. The studies in this course are pursued at home, and directed by correspondence.

Samuel Neyhard, surveyor and conveyancer, is doing a large amount of work in different sections of the county. He is careful and accurate, and his drafts are made in the highest style of art. We were lately shown a plot made by him for the Catawissa Paper Mill Company, which cannot be surpassed in neatness.

M.—and on Friday August 25th in the Union Church at Orangeville at 10 A. M. and in the Hidley Church at 2 P. M. A number of ministers will be present. There will be a short address delivered in German in connection with the service. All are invited. A. HOUTZ, Pastor.

Chairman Hensel of the State Central Committee requests that the price of Democratic papers be made so low during the campaign that every voter can procure a copy. For this reason we have put the price of the COLUMBIAN for the next three months at 30 cents. Committemen and all friends of the cause should see that all the voters in each district are on the list. Each patron of this paper can easily send us one or two names.

The colored camp meeting at Rupert has closed. A large crowd was present on Sunday, and a number of leading ministers of the African church delivered discourses, some of which were said to be able efforts. While the intention of these meetings is undoubtedly good, it has become perverted until there is too much picnic and too little religion in them. A number of ministers of the M. E. Church have recently declared their opposition to camp meetings.

In the Hazleton Sentinel, Elizabeth Sauer, of Jeddo, publishes the following: "I, the undersigned, give notice to Heinrich Sauer, who left me without just cause, whatsoever, that if he does not return to me, his legal wife, within two weeks from date, I will consider all marriage ties as null and void, and will again be married at my own pleasure." This may seem to be a happy way to avoid the costs incidental to a suit for divorce, but we hardly think it will work.

The Syracuse papers have unitedly resolved to charge advertising rates for all notices of excursions, picnics, church and society festivals, etc., at which money is taken, henceforth. There is no reason that we are aware of why the printer should not be paid for the use of his types, as well as any person who furnishes supplies. For some inexplicable cause, the printer alone is expected to bring money to everybody's pocket but his own.—Watkins Express.

Under instructions from the Auditor-General the mercantile appraiser this year assessed the butchers of the county with a tax. A few paid it, and a suit was brought against those who refused to pay the tax. The cases were heard last week by a Lancaster Alderman, and decided in favor of the commonwealth. The butchers have appealed from the decision of the alderman, and their appeals have been entered in the Court of Common Pleas.—Columbia Herald.

The driver boys in the mines of Charles Parrish & Co., Wilkesbarre, are on a strike. A secret meeting was held Monday afternoon between the striking driver boys and Charles Parrish & Co. They have refused to furnish any information to the press. It is rumored at the mines that Charles Parrish refused to make any compromise with them while on a strike. Should they return to work he will pay them the same wages and allow them the same time as any other colliery is now doing in this country.

Now that the Post of the G. A. R. is thoroughly reorganized, and in good working order, we would suggest that it would be proper for them to agitate the question of erecting a monument to the memory of their deceased comrades. A dozen years ago a fund was started for that purpose, amounting to about one hundred and fifty dollars. This should be hunted up, and with accrued interest it will now make a respectable starting point. The men who gave their lives for the country deserve this recognition, and they should be no longer neglected.

Some level-headed country newspaper scribe propounds the following sensible interrogatories: "Do your city papers give you home news? Do they contain notices of your churches, schools, meetings, improvements, and hundreds of other matters of interest which the local paper publishes without pay? Do they say a word calculated to draw attention to your town, and aid in the progress and enterprise of your immediate vicinity? Answer these questions and then determine for yourself whether the city or local paper is deserving of your support, first of all."

The M. E. Church at Chestnut Grove, Rohrsburg charge, will be dedicated on Sunday August 27th at two o'clock, by Rev. W. W. Evans.

A little son of the sexton of the Williamsport cemetery was killed by the falling of a tombstone which crushed his skull. He was playing in the cemetery while his father was at work. Mr. Grieninger placed his hand against a large head stone to straighten it up, when the stone broke off suddenly, even with the ground, and fell over in the direction of his wife and child, the corner striking the little boy in the forehead, killing him instantly.

If there is any talk in the county about organizing a movement of dissatisfied Democrats to put another ticket in the field, the Republican is the only paper that has heard of it. No doubt, it would gladly encourage a movement of that kind in the hope of lessening the vote for the state ticket.

The new grange hall in Mt. Pleasant township will be dedicated on Saturday afternoon, August 26th at two o'clock. A festival will be held on Friday evening. The public is invited.

At last the mystery surrounding the Keating (Clinton county) suicide is unraveled. Carl Duhlmeyer, the man who shot himself, was an officer of the German government and went wrong to the extent of 91,000 marks—about $20,250. He fled the country, hoping to escape the penalty of law, but while successful in evading the officers his conscience troubled him above all things else. Like a thief, he was afraid of his own shadow, and rather than run the risk of capture and disgrace death by his own hand was preferable.

Paper bags from ¼ lb. to 10 lbs. at the COLUMBIAN office.

Stephen H. Wolf announces his name in the Catawissa Item as an independent candidate for sheriff, and states that he wishes to be beaten, if at all, by the people at the ballot box, and not by the "ring" at Bloomsburg. Evidently Mr. Wolf does not know when he is beaten. After a long and active canvass of the county he received only a little over 300 votes, while Mourey had over 1400, beating Wolf 4 to 1. This looks as though the people had something to do with making the nomination and not the "ring at Bloomsburg."

Mountain Grove camp meeting was pretty well attended this year. All the buildings have been newly painted and present a fine appearance. A number of citizens tented this year and were there during the entire season. There were many also who drove over for a day, returning again in the evening. On Tuesday a party of seventeen went over with Mr. Buckalew's large livery wagon, drawn by four horses. Among those who had tents for the season were Rev. Smyser, Mr. L. T. Sharpless, Mr. John Wolf, Mrs. S. Turnbach, Mr. Smith, Mr. Wagonseller, Mr. K. C. Ent, with their families.

Submarine Work at Sunbury.

Before the sinking of the crib of the ninth pier of the new railroad bridge at Sunbury it was necessary to remove a strata of pure white sand overlaying the rock at that point, and known as the sand bar. This was successfully done on Monday and Tuesday of last week by means of the steam pumping machinery. The water is about twelve feet deep, and some hundreds of tons of sand were sucked up through a six inch hose and discharged below the pier. The diver, while guiding the hose at the bottom of the river, found a handsome gold and black fountain pen in excellent condition. He said he was greatly interested by the appearance of an enormous fish, which he thinks was a salmon. The fish approached him frequently, but quickly backed out at every attempt to take hold of him, wondering, perhaps, what new denizen of the water was trying to make his acquaintance. The fish remained near him over an hour before taking his departure. The diver in his submarine armour looked as much like an inhabitant of the sea as a human being.—American.

Council Proceedings.

Council met at 7:30 Aug. 8th for regular meeting, all members present except Wm. Moyer.

The committee on procuring limestone for repairing highway was continued, upon report of a committee appointed for that purpose it was ascertained that the property holders along the street from Rock street to the Lightstreet road were opposed to the opening of the proposed street.

Resolutions were presented by Chas. G. Barkley, town solicitor, for the issuing of bonds to the amount of $3,000, which was adopted by the council.

Lamp posts were ordered to be placed at the corner of Jefferson and Fifth streets, West and Fifth streets, and West and Sixth streets.

A committee of two was appointed by the council to locate a fire plug near the woolen mills. A resolution was adopted that the Commissioner of highways be instructed to notify G. M. & J. K. Lockard to open and keep open the side walks and street in front of their works on East street.

Centralia Clippings.

Some time ago the coal vein worked at Logan colliery, Centralia, was lost. L. A. Riley & Co., operating the colliery, searched diligently for it for some months past but met with poor success until but recently when the vein was suddenly struck rich. It is now proposed to drive a tunnel back to the vein which will enable them to secure the coal. The vein as to quality and quantity is highly satisfactory.

Centralia is having its boom just now, and a very lively one it is. Besides the regular works, the Continental colliery will soon be in working order again, the Lehigh Co. having taken hold of it, are pumping it out very rapidly. Over 40 houses are now in the course of erection, and Riley & Co., after Supt. Reese's new house is finished, will begin the erection of an immense store just south of the Freck mansion, and adjoining the railroad. It is to be 40 by 100 feet and two stories high. The Reading Company also have in contemplation the extention of their branch line from Girardville through to Mount Carmel, most of the way having been graded some years ago.

As Frederick Kilmaier, of Centralia, was on his way to Minersville, in a carriage, at a point between Ashland and the head of the first Gordon plane, three men jumped out of the bushes and demanded his money. Not having any money on his person, he could not comply with their wishes, and started the horse away from them at full speed. On seeing this the highwaymen pulled out their revolvers and fired at him, one of the shots striking him on the leg making a painful wound. He came to Ashland as quickly as possible and related the foregoing as his experience. He was taken to Dr. Marshall's residence, where he had the wound dressed. Kilmaier is employed by D. F. Curry, of Centralia, as hostler. Centralia people do not believe the story, and think he accidentally shot himself while handling a revolver which he had on his person.

HOLIDAYS—DRUGS—ADORNMENTS—SEA-BATHING—SPECULATION—RIVER AND HARBOR BILL—&c.,—&c.,—&c.

PHILADELPHIA Aug. 15, 1882.

Some of the people whose holiday time came early in the summer are now returning to swelter in the August heat. They are well sun-browned and have brought home a fair stock of renewed health. Yet the truly happy fellows are they who now begin their summering and keep at it until the opening of September ushers in the cool evenings.

The hot and dusty spell of last week has given way to pleasant breezes and cooling showers. The city is now endurable, instead of being the furnace it was. And yet the country boarding places in the vicinity and the sea shore resorts within two or three hours ride are packed, and may be expected to continue so all this month.

DRUGS AND THE DRUGGISTS.

There is a good deal of stir just now over the way in which some of the druggists put up physicians' prescriptions. At the leading apothecary stores there is no difficulty, for they do business enough to make it pay to keep an ample stock of pure medicines of any variety that may be called for. Some of the cheaper concerns if they do not happen to have what is called for, put in what they consider the next best thing. Sometimes this proves to be something which is merely inert, and sometimes it is mischievous. Sometimes they have the article called for, but of an inferior quality. The physicians and the better class of druggists justly protest against this sort of business.

THE LADIES AND THEIR JEWELRY.

Visitors to sea-side resorts this summer have noticed the fact that ladies are wearing much more jewelry than was formerly customary at these places. It is seen in every form, from the comparatively plain silver lace pin to the elegant and costly diamond finger rings and ear-rings. The gold jewelry, such as takes shape in lace-pins and bracelets is specially noticeable for its beauty, its varied forms and the novelty and eccentricity of the designs in which it is made. Ladies now wear their diamonds at all hours of the day which is probably better than to leave them in their trunks to be stolen. It is hardly necessary to say that the neatest and most tasteful things in jewelry for ladies are those which come from Baily Banks & Biddle's.

SPECULATION.

The whole list of stock shows lower prices within the last few days. This is principally owing to the absence of a great many of the most lively operators. Last year most of these gentlemen were at summer resorts where "tickers" gave them, every minute, the prices of the leading fancies. They found the strain on their nerves too much for them, when they wanted rest and health. This year there is less "ticker" and more leisure. The grain fluctuations of the last ten days, especially in wheat, have been very active, owing chiefly to the contradictory reports about the crops. Corn has bounced up and down with variations not exceeding three or four cents. A shrewd or lucky operator, call it which you please, made nearly $50,000 in a few days by a quick turn on oats. The wheat crop is immense and prices of that staple will probably not advance much unless driven up by a general European war.

Near the sea port a lady dropped a valuable bracelet while bathing in the surf. She dived for it in vain, and says that hereafter she will not take her jewelry into the water.

At Bryn Mawr some of the fashionables have been disturbed by the alleged discovery of snakes.

Almost everybody says it was an impudent piece of rascality for Congress to pass that River and Harbor Bill over President Arthur's veto.

Peaches are behind time, good ones are scarce and poor ones are not wanted.

Printing Office Secrets.

The Singleton (N. S. W.) Argus prints the following reply to an inquiry as to the author of an article in that paper:

A properly conducted printing office is as much a secret as a Masonic lodge. The printers are not under oath or secrecy, but always feel themselves as truly in honor bound to keep office secrets as though triple oathed. Any employee in a printing office who willingly disregarded this rule in relation to printing-office secrets, would not only be scorned by his brethren of the craft, but would lose his position at once. We make this statement because it sometimes happens that a communication appears in a newspaper, under an assumed signature, which excites comment, and various parties try to find out who is the author. Let all be saved the trouble of questioning the employes of the printing office. They are "know-nothings" on such points as these. On such matters they have eyes and ears, but no mouth; and if any fail to observe this rule, let them be put down as dishonorable members of the craft. It is the same in job printing. If anything is to be printed and kept secret, let proper notice be given of the desire for secrecy, and you might as well question the Sphinx as one of the printers.

Catawissa Items.

Dentist W. J. Wright visited his home at Buckhorn on Saturday and Sunday.

W. C. McKinney of your town was here on Monday completing the telephone connection at this end of the wire.

Our town has been very lively during the past week owing to large delegations coming here from all sections of the county to take the train for Mountain Grove camp. Many of our citizens are regular tenters there.

Prof. A. N. Johnson, a noted musician of New York, who is associated with our townsmen, Truckenmiller & Keller, is holding a musical convention here. About thirty students from various parts of the county are in attendance. The convention will continue until the 7th of September.

John C. Yocum removed his law office on Thursday of last week from H. J. Reeder's building on Mill St., to the new Catawissa News Item building on Main St. He occupies the front suite of rooms (Nos. 1 and 2) on the second floor and has them fitted up with all new furniture, making one of the finest law offices in the county.

G. E. Meyers, editor and proprietor of the Catawissa News Item, moved his presses &c., into the basement of the new Item building on Main street, last week. He has had this room made to order for his own use as a printing office and as such it is very commodious and more convenient than most offices of this kind, he having his office, composing tables, type stands, presses and everything on the same floor. "Gid" is a good editor and no doubt the News Item will continue to prosper in its new home and increase in interest in consequence of these increased facilities.

Growing Peaches.

FAVORITE PEACHES.—The present season will give all interested in such matters an opportunity to test the merits of various sorts of peaches. The standard sorts for orchard culture are Troth's Early Red, George the Fourth, Honest John, Crawford's Early, Red Rareripe, Old Mixen Free, Stump-the-world, Susquehanna, Magnum Bonum, Crawford's Late, Druid Hill Smock, and Health Cling. The Susquehanna is a shy bearer, but its fine size will make up for lack of quality. As a rule, the yellow peaches sell the best. The fourth, eighth, ninth and twelfth on the list are of that description.

Peaches do best in a light soil; if on a heavy soil they grow too vigorously and the fruit will rot. While they will not succeed as generally as the apple, there are many localities where they will do very well; on the margin of a lake or river they are tolerably sure crop, where the late spring frosts are warded off by the influence of the water; or planted on a north hill side, where the trees will be late blossoming in the spring. The peach could be more extensively grown in the Northern States than it is. There is a popular fallacy that they will not thrive generally. Every farmer should grow enough for his own use at least.

PEACH TREES OVERBEARING.—The permitting of peach trees to bear immense crops of fruit is a very serious evil. To it may be charged the most of the diseases of the peach. The trees are weakened, and thus become easy prey to the diseases which destroy them. To guard against overbearing the trees should be shortened, in, say in February or March, cut away about one-half of the wood formed the previous year and keep the interior branches well thinned out, and the extra fine quality of the fruit will well repay the labor of this work; since in any season when peaches are plentiful, the markets are glutted with small inferior fruit, while that of fine quality will sell at any time for good prices. Besides this, when the fruit is about half grown, the trees should be carefully gone over, and if the fruit is clustered too thickly all needed should be pulled off. This process gives better fruit and keeps the tree healthy.

ROTTING OF EARLY PEACHES.—It is a desirable thing to have early peaches, say ripe in July in Pensylvania, but those about to plant should remember that there seems but little exception to the rule that all the early sorts are subject to the rot. Alexander, Hale's early and others like them, frequently lose from a third to two thirds of their fruit from this cause. In a paper read before the Pennsylvania State Horticultural Society, the following passage occurs:

"My object in this paper more than anything else, is to bring before this Society some questions connected with peach growing that appear to me to be very important, and on which light is very much needed, and one of these is, the subject of the universal rotting of all the early varieties. I wish to ask, first, is there a good variety earlier than Mountain Rose or Early York, that don't all rot before ripening? Second, does any one know the reason why, or can anybody throw any light on the question, why all the early varieties rot, when later ones in the same ground and same kind of weather, do not?"

Early peaches pay market-men better than late ones and this must be set off against the failing of the trees in regard to dropping their fruit.

PEACH YELLOWS.—The cultivation of the peach is becoming so general through the country that any information concerning it is of interest, and profitable reading. We have thus been tempted to find room for the following remarks of Mr. Harris, made before the New York Horticultural Society:

"Had invested pretty largely in a peach orchard, and found those best cultivated least afflicted. Had made up my mind that it is a disease that commences in the roots. Knew a sweeping wind, in the fall, to blow over a number of peach trees; they were set up again, and when they bore the next year, every one had the yellows. Has twenty-five acres in peaches, and has lost but few from yellows; thinks he had but three trees affected last year, and rooted them out; thinks it passes from tree to tree. The first diseased tree he had allowed to stand two years, when he dug it up and planted another in its place, and it has stood there two years, and is free from yellows. Buy good healthy trees and then cultivate well; don't plow deep near the tree, but half way between plow deep, cutting off roots, and new feeders will start out."

All may not agree as to the advisability of plowing off any roots. But all may be sure that the peach will well repay all the care given to it to keep it in vigorous health.

Poisonous Book Covers.

The use of poisonous dyes to color the covers of books is happily not a common practice. Yet book publishers are occasionally careless about the materials used in covering their books. Lately in Troy a child, while playing with some water-color paints, looked about for some palette, and seized a small book—attracted by the bright green color of its own cover. He mixed the paints on the covor of the book for some time. Then he was suddenly taken with convulsions. Physicians who were hastly summoned declared that he had been poisoned. They administrated antidotes, but the child went into convulsion after convulsion, and it was only after three days' incessant labor that the physicians saved his life. The child's wealthy parents afterward had the physicians investigate the manner of its being poisoned. They discovered that the dye with which the brightly covered book was covered contained the poison. In wetting the paints on the book cover the child had innocently wet also the dye—and soon transferred some of the poison to its own lips. There was a comical side to the investigation, although it was no consolation to the parents—the book was found to be a report of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

DON'T LET THE GROUND GET CRUSTED.—A very important point in tillage is to work the ground once over after any considerable rain, thoroughly scarify it with cultivator or drag, when it first becomes dry enough to work properly; this will keep it from crusting and leave the surface soil to act partly as a mulch over the roots of growing plants, besides putting the field into the most favorable condition for the crop, and should the soil be more or less inclined to clay, this named management is all important for keeping such heavy soils in a light, friable condition.

Useful Recipes.

TOMATO TOAST.—Run a quart of stewed ripe tomatoes through a colander, place in a porcelain stewpan, season with butter, pepper and salt and sugar to taste; cut slices of bread thin brown on both sides, butter and lay on a platter, and just as the bell rings for tea on Sunday add a pint of good sweet cream to the stewed tomatoes and pour them over the toast.

RENOVATING CHANDELIERS.—Nothing takes from the good looks of a room more than a dusty and discolored chandelier, and there is no need of having one in this condition when a few cents and a little time can remedy the matter. If bronze powder is mixed with copal varnish, it can be applied to the chandelier and make it look like new again. About the proportion in which they should be mixed, ask the druggist where you purchase them.

CLEANING BAKING DISHES.—Baking plates and pudding dishes that have been used for a long time need a thorough cleansing occasionlly. To do this put them in a kettle of water in which you have put a spoonful of wood ashes to one quart of water. Let them boil in this for an hour, and if any grease has been absorbed through cracks in the glazing, it will be removed, and pie crust baked on a plate thus cleaned will be sweet and not unwholesome.

CITRON CAKE.—A rich citron cake is made of the whites of twelve eggs, two cups of butter, four cups of sugar, four and a half cups of flour, half a cup of sweet milk, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and one pound of citron cut in thin and small slices. This makes one very large cake or two medium-sized ones, and, unless you have an excellent oven in which you can regulate the heat perfectly, it is better to bake in two tins than one. If one tin is used choose one with a funnel or spout in the centre. This does away with the danger of burnt edges and a raw centre to the cake.

SOUPS.—To make nutritious and palatable soup, with flavors well mingled requires study, practice, and good taste. The best basis for soup is lean uncooked meat, a pound of meat to a quart of water, to which may be added chicken, turkey, beef or mutton bones well broken up; a mixture of beef, mutton, and veal, with a bit of ham bone, all cut fine, makes a higher flavored soup than any single meat; the legs of all meats are rich in gelatine, an important constituent of soup. The best herbs are sage, thyme, sweet marjoram, tarragon, mint, sweet basil, parsley, bay leaves, cloves, mace, celery seed and onions. The best seasoning is that which is made up of the smallest quantity from each of many spices. The good soup maker must be a skillful taster.

TROUBLE SAVED.

It is a remarkable fact that Thomas' Eclectric Oil is as good for internal as external use. For diseases of the lungs and throat, and for rheumatism, neuralgia, crick in the back, wounds and sores, it is the best known remedy, and much trouble is saved by having it always on hand.

Two Crops of Potatoes in One Season.

It has been discovered that two crops of Early Rose potatoes can be grown on the land in a single season, and that it is worth testing in this section. Take young potatoes of this year's growth and dry for a few days in the shade; then put them in a trench or cold frame, throw water over them, cover with a few inches of dirt, and then place straw over the frame to prevent too much evaporation. At sundown place over them a glass sash, and remove it the next morning. In four or five days the potatoes will sprout, when they can be cut to eyes and planted. Whole potatoes do not answer as well as those that are cut. Plant in checks two and a half feet apart, or in drills three feet by eighteen inches, and cover lightly. From the digging of early potatoes to the middle of August is the proper time for the second crop. Cultivate them on the level method and do not hill. The points to be observed are to use plenty of fertiizer, as two crops exhaust the land; select good seed; be sure that the tubers are sprouted before planting; plant shallow, and endeavor to take advantage of the season. Or, to give a more economical method, the smaller potatoes, provided they are good, together with large ones, if desired, may be cut and bedded like the sweet potato, and when they are well sprouted can be taken up in the same manner, removing all but the most vigorous sprout, and transplanted. In doing this it is well, if possible, to take up the plant entire, with the earth and decaying potato adhering. The above is recommended by a fruit growers' and farmers' association, and it appears to be a good method for growing early potatoes as well as late ones.
